As we come to the end of our last year together, we look back upon all the influences in our lives. One strong force has been our community.

A community is many things. Our community is a small town with the natural beauty of sandy beaches, country roads and rocky shores. Yet it is more than places and things; it is the combined influence of all our homes and families. It is the guidance of church and youth groups. It is our schools and the people who teach us new skills and encourage us to grow. And within the school, it is a community of friends and classmates who share a common history.

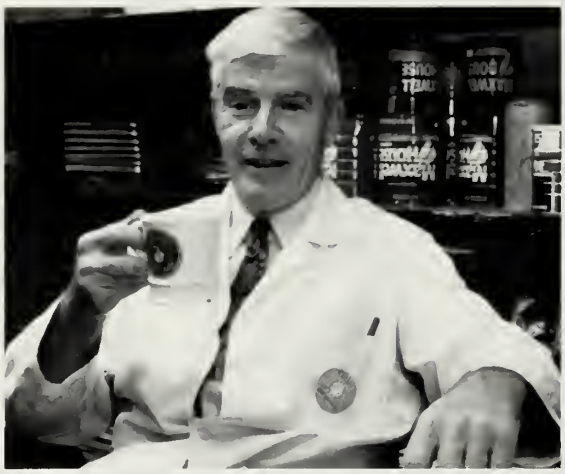
All these pieces combine to make the quilt of our community. We will carty it with us wherever we go.

DEDICATION

The wit of Mr. Gilmartin is obvious everytime we meet him. "Hi Toots!" "Hello girls.....you too, Robin." "Gentlemen, the hats!" There is no way to sneak by him in the halls without some personal comment that shows that we have been seen and duly greeted.

But wit is not the only characteristic we admire in Mr. Gilmartin. He's always willing to watch out f a student who may need a friend and to encourage a student who is struggling in Science or in any othe area. When not in Room 15, he can be found in his "office" helping students, setting up labs, or heating his coffee water on his Bunsen burner. We feel fortunate that the Marine Corps has shared the best of its "few good men" with us for the past 20 years.

"Beep, beep.....thanks, Toots!"



In appreciation of your dedication to CHS, your wisdom and the encouraging words that made our days brighter, we, the class of 1990, dedicate our yearbook to you, Mr. Gilmartin, our teacher and our friend.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE STUDENTS

Carole Denise Biaggi:
Hi! My name is Carole Denise Biaggi. This year I am staying with Michele Rourke and her family. I'm from Sierre, Switzerland but came to the United States to learn English well enough to hopefully go into hotel management in Switzerland. Also, I wanted to experience a different way of living. I enjoy the U.S. and I think the country has a lot to offer me. I'm glad I ended up in Cohasset because of the friendly people and its surroundings.

Mia Mansson:
My name is Mia Mansson. I am an exchange student from Sweden and I am staying with Ana Sandell and her family. I decided to come to the United States because I wanted to experience how it is to live in another country. I think that Cohasset, the Sandells, and my friends here are giving me a great opportunity to do that. I'm having a great year. Thank you, Mia.

Isabel Ramallo:
Hi! I'm Isabel Ramallo. I'm a Spanish student in the Class of 1990. I'm from Mallorca, an island that some of you know. It's fun. I have two younger sisters who may come to Cohasset in their senior year, too. I've found some nice people here in Cohasset. Thanks, you guys have made moving to Cohasset much easier. And mostly, I want to thank my wonderful family, the Dohertys. Thanks, Cohasset. Love, Isabel. "sweetie-sweetie"

Maria Vinals:
Ola! My name is Maria Vinals and I'm from Spain. I'm living with the Goedeckes until July. I just want to thank my family for making my stay in the United States better than I ever hoped it would be. Thanks also to my friends at Cohasset High. I'm having a great time. Thanks again, Maria.

Throughout our high school years, we have watched our class grow closer together. Although our fundraisers were not always profitable, they were certainly memorable. One of our most unforgettable experiences was the Red Sox game in which they clinched the divisional title. None of us will ever forget the trips to Montreal where the skiing was almost as much fun as the nightlife! Because our class is exceptionally small, we needed the cooperation of all our classmates. Without this, we would not have been able to accomplish all that we have. Thanks!

BARBERSHOP CHORUS

TENOR: J. Andrade, LEAD: S. Henderson, R. Jones, B. Pattison, BASS: G. Lennon, D. Moe, M. Silvia, BARITONE: J. Gaston

Barbershop music is as American as apple pie. Songs like "Wild Irish Rose" and "Sweet Adeline" are examples of tunes which often are harmonized in the "close-harmony" Barbershop style.

Popular groups such as the Beach Boys and the Nylons incorporate much of the same style. Barbershop therefore sings songs old and new with "close-harmony." Membership is open to students in grades 7-12 . . . Mr. Marks

SENIOR CHORUS

Front row: N. Roma, E. Sutherland, B. Corkery, J. Andrade, P. Tolini, K. Barrett, H. Lyons. 2nd row: A. Welz, A. Doherty, B. Migliaccio, M. Hansen, K. Richards, M. Kierce, C. Johnson, K. Story. 3rd row: M. Moore, T. Graham, J. Cedarstrom, J. Kehoe, R. Jones, J. Caristi, M. Silvia.

Holiday Concert, Valentine Cabaret, Spring Concert, Pops Concert and a trip or competition are usual showcases for the Sr. Chorus. This group has won awards and honors over the years. We are especially proud of our selection in 1987 to perform at Disney World and our participation with over 15,000 in "America Sings" in 1989. This choral event raised money and consciousness about the problem of homeless children.

Jr. Chorus begins the singer's experience with three-part harmony, usually soprano, alto, and baritone. As a member of Jr. and Sr. Chorus, a student may audition for music festivals like SEMSBA and District where the outstanding talent from S.E. Mass is showcased. Everyone in Jr. Chorus performs in the Holiday Concert, Spring Concert, and Pops Concert. In addition, performances like exchange concerts and community performances are not uncommon. At Christmastime, we performed for a Mass at St. Anthony's Church.

During the 1989 season, the team struggled against incredible odds. Because of a lack of players, we had virtually no substitutes and the team had a tough time in the second half of every game. 19-3-1 and we certainly had some fun — our 5th straight league title didn't come without a battle — the trip through the tourney was a fantasy journey. Medfield, Fairhaven and D.S. gave us a hard time, but we moved on. POWDERPUFF

Thanks to the superb coaching from Mr. Walsh and Mr. Emmons, the seniors scored early, sweeping around end to the utter dismay of the faked-out junior defense. What had been predicted as a blowout by the juniors became a suspenseful see-saw battle with the final score somewhat in doubt.

Senior Patricia Smith dazzled the defense with her incredible speed, Jill Hamilton starred on offense, grinding out many hard fought yards, Michelle Hartley provided additional backfield balance and Juliana Chittick mixed her plays skillfully.

Defensive might was displayed in the trenches by senior standouts Laura "Bruiser" Smart, Suzzunne "Crusher" DeCruz, Edith "Evil" Saint Eloi, Liz "Bust 'em" Buckley and Candy "Killer" Jones.

These seniors tried not to let the freezing weather get to them.

Steffanie Fox, Katie Colburn and Pam Haase were key players on the senior's defensive team.

So that's where Edith got her nickname!

And a special thanks to Mr. Gill for reffing our game and putting up with us!

SPIRIT WEEK

The week before Homecoming, the students of CHS definitely showed their spirit. The days included:College Sweatshirt Day, Clash Day, Pajama Day, 50's/60's Day, and Blue/White Day. As always, the junior high showed the most enthusiasm throughout the week. The seniors, on the other hand, were careful not to outdo themselves, (too much spirit just isn't cool). Hats off to the Class of 1990! (At least they didn't show up in black like those crazy rebels last year!)

Check out those sexy legs!!

That's the best looking cheerleader I've ever seen!

Are the Toga Studs enjoying themselves or what?

The most exciting game of the girls basketball season was against Abington. Abington had "packed the place" with a band, cheerleaders and a gym full of screaming fans. Although it was a rebuilding year for the Boys Basketball team, the season had its rewards. The season highlight was our upset of league-leading Norwell in overtime, 50-41, under the leadership of Mike Ellinger (12 points, 9 rebounds), Noah Hill (10 points, 8 rebounds), and Linc Marsac (21 points, 12 rebounds). With 26 members, the 1989-1990 team was the largest Cohasset wrestling squad ever assembled. It included four seniors, Brian Shultz and Tri-Captains Gregg Nourie, Pat Conroy, and Eric Theriault. Four wrestlers qualified for the state tournament, Nate Fiore, Bill Baird, Pat Conroy, and Gregg Nourie. Their example set the standard for next year's team to follow.

COLLABORATIVE CLASSES

Ms. Goldenberg

The Collaborative classes have been an exciting addition to Cohasset High School's student body. Not only have we come to know the kids, we have been able to work as aides in their classes. Those who have helped out are: Kristin Martin, Travis Coley, Melissa Christoffel, Ollie Nivaud, Amy Currier, Edith Saint Eloi, and Maria Kierce. We've made new friends and we're glad they're here!

The second season of the lacrosse team resulted in a 4-3-1 record. The most exciting game was the B.C. High 4 sudden-death overtime which ended in a 9-9 tie. At least 50 kids came out for lacrosse and many will be attending lacrosse camp, ensuring skilled players for next year.

Captain — Sophie Redfield

It was a good season for the tennis team. We were 8-2 in the league and made it to the State Tournament where we lost in a close match in the second round. With an experienced team, next year should be even more successful.

Thank you, Coach MacDermott, for all of your efforts.

Senior Edith Saint Eloi won the William Ripley Track Award and senior Patricia Smith qualified for the state Class Track meet. Senior Maria Vinals, an exchange student from Spain, had never competed before and was an enthusiastic addition to the team. With the strength provided by Alison James, we are looking forward to a great season next year.

SPRING SPORTS CANDIDS

CLASS STORY

It was the year 2010; Americans were consuming more cholesterol-saturated foods than ever, NASA hadn't established a foothold on Mars and nobody seemed to care that Pat Sajack had a late night talk show. Times were rough for some and profitable for others. One of those who profited the most from the 90's was the dashingly debonair Mr. Jason R. Cameron. Jason, the Donald Trump/Hugh Hefner of the 21st century, kindly offered his modest Newport mansion for a class of 1990 reunion. It was a black tie affair. However, it was to be an evening of wining and dining that none of us would ever forget...

Jason greeted us at the door with a babe on each arm. To each guest, he introduced Bunny and Cupcake; the girls looked quite alike, except Bunny had a freckle on her nose. Eric Theriault, People magazine's most eligible bachelor for the year 2010, noted that Cupcake looked very much like Vanna and wanted to know if she was interested in turning letters for him.

It was about 8:00 p.m. and we all were busy munching on hors d'oeuvres when Jason attracted our attention by chiming a spoon against his crystal wine glass.

"Greetings and welcome to you all," spoke the host, "the bar is open and..."

"It can't be!" shrieked Tracy Christina who had just emerged from the kitchen.

"Hey, I don't see what's wrong with an open bar," snickered Terry O'Leary.

"Oh, no!" screamed the hysterical Lauren Wood, looking at the empty jar of Miracle Whip that Tracy held in her hand. "A party just isn't a party without the zesty taste of Miracle Whip!"

"Well," commented Dr. Julie Caristi, "if you knew the caloric content of that Miracle Whip, you would thank your lucky stars that the chef is all out of it. Anyway, I prefer Helman's myself."

Greg Knowles, oblivious to the chatter about mayonnaise, passed out his business cards to the guests. Greg, deciding that hair was a good thing to have, bought Sy Sperling's Hair Club for Men; and folks, Greg isn't just the president of the Hair Club for Men, but he's also a client.

At 8:35 p.m., the doorbell chimed. Bouncer Sean Bishop went to the door to see who was ringing. When he opened the door, President Brian Shultz entered with an entourage of secret service men.

"Hey, Butthead, get back here!" admonished Sean.

Before Sean could say another word, the secret service men quickly removed him from the scene and brought him up on conspiracy charges.

"Whadoyaknow, it's the President of the United States of America and his entourage of clowns! What a freakin' circus this place is gonna be," commented David Farrag. David had just recently established the L.F.A.O (Little Fascists of America Organization) and was quite interested in systematically deprogramming children who believed that democracy was as good thing.

"I have arrived. Bring out the food," announced Mr. President.

"Figures," whispered Steffanie Fox, "he's just as obnoxious as ever."

"Yeah," agreed Madlyn MacDonald, "he used to put his stinking feet up on my chair during history class. I coulda killed him."

"Maybe we still can..." said Michael "Twiggy" Mercurio from the shadows.

While frequenting the raw bar, Candi Jones bumped into talk show host Steve Ritts. Steve proudly informed Candi that his rating were slightly above those of Geraldo. Candi nearly choked on an oyster as she held back the laughter. "I'm sure that Johnny Carson better watch out!" she said.

Across the room, Pam Haase involved herself in a deep philosophical discussion with Robin Haynes. However, it was somewhat of a one-sided conversation, as Robin entertained herself with thoughts of her new book, The Joy of Sax.

Now seated at the banquet table were the Michelles. Michelle Hartley announced to the world that she owned a very successful private escort service called The Pretty Woman. Nobody was listening. Michele Rourke giggled girlishly at Steve's invitation to be on his show; Steve laughed even harder when he told her that he was only joking. Michelle Massa, the renowned New York Times critic, received nasty looks from Deana Genovese, who stood at the bar. Michelle had recently condemned Deana's play, Toiletries.

While Adrienne May admired the organisms in Jason's fish tank, Stephanie Damron tried to convince her to invest in Tupperware. "And the great thing is," chirped Stephanie, "you can even put it in the dishwasher!"

Mike Dockray, standing by bartender Sean Gallagher, raised his glass to toast his own genius. He was still celebrating his four star performance on Star Search; Noah Hill, Sean McCarthy and he had performed an interpretive dance created by Mike. It went over big with Ed McMahon and there was talk of a contract.

In a private corner stood the beautiful people. Carrie Ripley explained to ELLE covergirl, Mia Mansson, that her new aerobic workout video had just hit the million-sold mark. Nobody knew that Carrie was a closet eater. Next to Carrie stood Amy Currier who conversed with her guests, Metallica. While kinda sorta listening to Amy's conversation, Mike Ellinger proposed a rather goofy request to weatherman Ian Browne.

"Can you do me a big favor, Ian?" questioned Mike. "I'm getting married next June and I want to know what the weather'll be like so I can plan accordingly."

"Can't help you there," retorted Ian. "I've got a hard enough time figuring out what the weather'll be tomorrow."

Finally supper was to be served. Everybody began moving to their reserved seats and this caused a small amount of dissatisfaction amongst the guests. Kenneth Caristi, the Nobel Prize winning physicist, was seated next to Maria Zunica; much to Kenny's dismay, Maria dared to doubt the laws of physics while in his presence. In order to remedy the situation, Kenny turned to Patrick Conroy and began to expound upon the miracles of the physical world.

"Ken, you know that I hated Mr. Erbe's physics class. Please don't discuss this with me - I'm not on your wavelength," spoke Patrick, searching for Isabel.

"Say, speaking of wavelength, I was recently involved with an experiment..."

Before Ken could continue pontificating, Maria burst into his conversation. Ken requested a seat change.

When everybody was happily seated, two empty places remained. Kathleen Colburn and Frank Willshire were missing-in-action. There was some rumor that Kathleen couldn't be present because she was too busy buying Japan. People searched for Frank, but then the knowledge of his whereabouts hit Jason like a bat from hell.

"Ah, but of course," realized Jason, "Frank has gone to my study. That is where I keep my IBM."

After sending a butler upstairs to check on Frank, it became known that Frank was working on a very overdue pascal program for Mr. Walsh. Seemingly, Frank really wanted to jazz it up.

"Fer cryin' out loud!" screeched Juliana in an unladylike fashion and to everybody's surprise. "Why doesn't he just give it up! He always has to be number one, uno, the big cheese! I've had it! I'm going up to pull the plug. Be sure to save me some dessert." And off she marched.

"Well, what an unnecessary fuss that was!" stated the rightly appalled Kristin Jackson. "I don't even complain that much when my five-year old students get their finger paints on the wood floor. I don't even complain that much when David blows up the lasagna, that I spent hours making, because he microwaves it for twenty minutes and not ten.

"Then what the heck are you doing now?" snapped Edith Saint Eloi. "I'm going to give you two seconds to knock it off and then I'm going to give you something to complain about!"

"Hallelujah!" interjected Patricia Smith.

Kristin closed her mouth but stared at Edith, aghast. Edith ignored Kristin and began to enjoy her meal.

Another conflict arose at the other end of the table where the President sat. Jim Long, the Vice-President, taunted Brian Shultz, his superior.

"I took your lobster tail and I'm not giving it back," teased Jim.

"Give it back, Jim. That's what I came for so give it back."

"No way, no day. It's mine. M-i-n-e! All mine!"

"Knock it off Jim!" whined Brian.

The secret service men advised Brian to discontinue his childish behavior and act like the President of the United States for once. Brian would not. He intended to get that lobster tail back if it cost him his life.

Before long, a fight broke out. The guests were all wild with disbelief; the President and Vice-President were slugging it out over a lobster tail. Before long, mass hysteria broke lose and people ran and screamed and discussed politics with their fists. Matt Silvia pulled out his video camera and began taping the action. However, Matt got punched in the stomach and just as he was keeling over in pain, a shot rang out.

There was only silence.

Everybody froze and looked at the President, Brian Shultz. Brian lay on the marble, motionless.

WHO DONE IT?? Was it the power hungry host? Jason and the President never had a favorable rapport; Jason wanted to monopolize the country and Brian wouldn't alter the laws to facilitate it. Was it Madlyn? Had Brian put his smelly feet up on her chair one too many times during history class? Could it have been the jealous Vice-President? Or was it Dave Farrag, the Fascist leader himself? Could it have been Chris McElroy; Chris wanted so much to silence his age-old debating opponent? Maybe it was his wife, Charlotte Begley; maybe she was tired of listening to him snore the night away. Maybe it was...

Immediately after the commotion, Karen Atkinson, R.N., rushed over to the President. To her relief, Mr. President was alive and well. The bullet had bounced right off his bullet-proof vest. Yippee!

The secret service men thought it best that Brian and Jim leave the party at once. Nobody got too upset about the departure and the festivities continued as planned. After the President shoved off, a rather large cake was wheeled out onto the center of the floor. Kerri Anglin nearly drooled, as she had a very sweet tooth. The now famous Andrea "Mouse" Cann squeaked that the cake was the largest she'd ever seen.

Just as chef Joel Whitman was about to slice the cake, the top flung open and Chippendale dancer Curt Ludlow emerged from the frosted box wearing next to nothing.

"Oh pooh," sighed Kerri, who looked forward to dessert.

"Oh yeah!" cried Laura Smart, who found Curt very sexy. "I have a life size poster of him in my apartment," she later confessed.

"Yech!" blurted out artist Kasey Smith. "How distasteful. That certainly doesn't give me any inspiration for artwork! What about you, Dudley? Dudley?"

Dudley Bryan, one of Disney's highest paid artists, was too busy sketching a mural on Jason's wall to tune into reality.

Most of the other guests hung on the bar; the entertainment was there. Jim and Joel Reidy argued vehemently about whose Little League team played better. Jim coached Jim Jr. on the Redbirds and Joel coached Joel Jr. on the Bluebirds. To help resolve the argument, Father Scott Molinari informed them that they were both mistaken because his church team had the best record around.

Greg Nourie, a Cassanova of sorts, approached Dallas Cowboy Cheerleader Brooke Anderson.

"Hey baby, what's your sign?" cooed Greg.

Brooke flashed her pearly whites and told him that she didn't know. Realizing that he and Brooke were not on the same plane of existence, Greg pulled his line on Carole Biaggi.

"You want to know my sign, eh? My sign has eight sides and it's red, so get lost!"

Greg got his answer and moved on down the line.

Meanwhile, Greg Thomas was busy explaining to John MacDonald that he turned to professional bowling when his hopes of studying law fell through. John tried to cheer Greg up by letting him know that Hilary Proodian had a tattoo of a skull and crossbones in a rather obscure place that couldn't be shown it in public. No one knew if the rumor was true.

Jill Hamilton was rehashing the events of the evening when her eyes lit up. Jill suddenly realized that Curt's stunt was not simply funny but it was "sooo funny" that it would have to go in her diary when she got home. Karin Story thought that the whole thing was distasteful and Veronica de Vos was floating in space and consequently, had no comment.

At the dessert bar, Suzzunne DeCruz attempted to convince Liz Buckley that Mary Kay cosmetics were the finest on the market. Suzzunne, pregnant with her fifth child, decided to drop out of medical school when she realized that slicing and dicing cadavers just wasn't her cup of tea. To supplement the family's income, Suzzunne sold Mary Kay religiously and whenever the opportunity arose. But despite Suzzunne's persistence, Liz Buckley refused to purchase any cosmetics, as she had recently joined an Amish community somewhere in Pennsylvania.

Zach Hochkeppel, a poet laureate, approached Alida Dean and exclaimed with the utmost ecstasy, "You're silky hair is as golden as sun drops and your eyes as blue as the sea, fair maiden!"

Alida, quite aware of Zach's nature, answered back, "What is this poem called, Zach? Ode to idiocy? I colored my hair red five years ago and my eyes are green." Zach wrote the lines down on a napkin anyway.

The end of the party approached quickly and Jason seemed eager for its finish. Airforce fighter pilot Rich McLaughlin offered to take Justin Muir for a spin sometime since he had helped to clear Rich's disparaging record. Justin, a member of the F.B.I., decided to pass on Rich's offer, mentioning that he quite liked having two feet on the ground at all times. Nora, a representative for Bali undergarments, also agreed that flying only made her ill.

As Jason shoved us out the door at 12:30 a.m., he said that he'd love to have us all back - in another twenty years. Mike Rolandelli, the host of Saturday Night Live's Wayne's World said, "Like until then, party on, dude. Bunny and Cupcake are certainly babelicious, man. You mind if I take one home for a momento?" Jason was disturbed by this comment but he smiled anyway. As he shut the door, he relaxed knowing that twenty years was a long, long time.
